This paper will always fight for progress and reform. It will not knowingly tolerate injustice or corruption and will always fight demagogues of all parties; it will expose privileged classes and public plunderers; it will never lack sympathy with the poor. It will always remain devoted to the public welfare and will never be satisfied with merely printing news. It will always be drastically independent and will never be afraid to attack wrongs, whether committed by the rich or the poor.

GASOLINE AS A SOURCE OF DANGER

The shocking accident of last Saturday, in which one of the noblest of women lost her life, is a terrible reminder of the great danger attending the use of gasoline in any home. Gunpowder contains no greater elements of danger than does gasoline when employed in cleaning garments in a room in which there is a fire. The fluid is highly volatile, filling a warm room with gas in an incredibly short time. The gas is inflammable and when a large quantity of it bursts into flame, those caught in the sea of fire are most fortunate if they escape without fatal burns.

Selling unlabeled poison to a community is not liable to produce worse results than the retailing of gasoline without imperative instructions that the liquid must not be used for cleaning purposes in a closely confined area where there is fire.

REWARD INCREASED BY THE STATE OF UTAH

On last Saturday Governor Spry increased the reward for the Ogden blackhanders from $500 to $550, and for this act he has the thanks of every law abiding citizen of Ogden.

The Standard was displeased when the Governor made the original reward only $500 and pointed out that the amount should be increased to a sum large enough to prove tempting to any one who could furnish information that would lead to the capture of the bandits.

Our morning contemporary opposed the position taken by the Standard and devoted much space in attempting to prove that the limit of a state reward had been reached.

The Standard holds that the primary object of government is to maintain security of life and property. Our declaration of independence makes that purpose of government fundamental. When the ordinary processes fail, then those in authority, commissioned to preserve the peace, must resort to the extraordinary, and in this case, the state was obligated to do its utmost. The governor, when fully informed by the Standard as to the seriousness of the situation, was quick to respond by increasing the reward to large proportions.

There is now posted the following authenticated rewards for the black-handlers:

By the state of Utah, $5500.
By Weber county, $1000.
By Ogden City, $1000.

Two private subscriptions of $500 each are said to have been made, but unless the money is deposited as a fund in one of the local banks, and specifically set aside for that purpose, the offers will not be considered by detectives and others who might be induced to work on the case.

However, the Standard does not favor private subscriptions, believing that the duty of maintaining the dignity of the law rests with the state, the county and the city and that each unit of the machinery of the law should be made to perform its full part as a demonstration of fitness and a proof of a power great enough to put down any attack on the security of the lives and property of our citizens.

By the state of Utah standing back of the county of Weber and the City of Ogden in this resolve to uproot the worst form of lawlessness with which any part of Utah has ever been called upon to cope, notice is served on the present offenders and on any other similarly disposed criminals that they cannot hope to escape capture and punishment.

BLACKHAND LETTERS IN OTHER CITIES.

Within ten days blackhand letters have been received by business men in both Provo and Logan.

Two letters have been delivered to a Logan merchant, making demands and carrying threats. In Provo, the receiver of a letter was ordered to place a certain sum of money at a designated spot.

Before this blackhand method of extorting money grows to be a common crime, it is to be hoped that the system will lose its attractiveness by one or more of the blackhanders being brought to justice.

PUBLIC COMMENT ON OUR SUGGESTION.

"The Editor Standard: I was pleased to read your editorial referring to the dangerous practice of automobile drivers cutting the corners in the busy parts of town. This is a very serious matter and should be given some attention before, and not after, an accident happens.

"I have often thought it would be a good thing if we could prevail upon our police officers to quit the cigar stands and come out on the street where they could do so much practical work in making travel somewhat less dangerous.

"I commend your editorial on this subject. Very truly yours, (Signed) ALFRED GLADWELL."

The Standard is convinced that there is a public demand for an ordinance prohibiting the cutting of corners by automobiles or other vehicles, and, as our city commissioners have proved to be responsive to meritorious suggestion, we expect to see them act on this subject without delay.

AMERICA, AS SEEN BY A STRANGER.

To see ourselves as others see us, we reproduce a paragraph from G. Ferrero's impressions of the United States, as follows:

"In North America, or at least in its Eastern States, there are vast and desolate tracts. From time to time a village appears, bristling with chimneys. Then the traveler slips on into the deserted country. Another village appears, disappears. Then all at once the train begins to rush through the midst of houses. On, on it goes. The houses never cease to follow it. Huge edifices rise from the midst of the little dwellings like giants in a crowd of dwarfs. Automobiles and trolley cars move through the streets. It is a great city; half a million, a million, two million men are crowded together there in the shadow of a thousand chimneys, surrounded on every side by an almost deserted country. What a strange sight are these wildernesses to a European, accustomed to live in one of the crowded countries of the Old World, where men have built their houses everywhere, from the shores of the sea up to the highest habitable slopes of the mountains!"

END OF BIG STRIKE ON SOUTHERN PACIFIC.

The ending of the Southern Pacific strike which involved the trainmen on the "Sunset" route, will be accepted as good news in Ogden, as neither the employees nor the officers of the company here wanted to see the strike go on until it spread to the entire system.

A strike of such large proportions as the Southern Pacific without might have become would have been a calamity to the west, if not to this entire country.

At this time, when financial conditions generally are not the best, and business is going through the readjustment of a new tariff and the uncertainties of currency legislation, a strike, involving one of the great arteries of trade and drawing into its vortex every other line of business and lifting idleness on thousands of workmen, might be the one untoward event necessary to precipitate the country into a long period of depression.

OGDEN MAN AT THE BANQUET GIVEN B. F. BUSH

"The reception tendered to Benjamin F. Bush, president of the Gould system of railroads and his associates, at the Commercial club in Salt Lake Saturday night was a great meeting and means much for the future of the state of Utah," said J. J. Brummitt of Ogden, who was among the invited at the banquet table.

"The personnel of those present consisted of many of the leading financiers, railroad men, bankers, promoters and contractors, not only of the intermountain country, but of the national, in fact it was an assembling of the empire builders of the intermountain country and of those who are most vitally interested in the development of the great state of Utah."

"The banquet was all that could be desired, but the chief benefit of the evening was the speeches delivered in response to the various toasts. Frank Knox, president of the National Bank of the Republic, was toastmaster and in his introductory remarks showed the marvelous wealth and resources of the state of Utah, he pointing out the vast coal, copper and iron fields whose deposits make a grand total of $1,211,473,500,000. While in an agricultural way we had 55,000,000 acres of undeveloped agricultural land, much of which is the finest agricultural land of the nation, especially adapted to fruit, grain and hay."

"The Honorable William Spry gave a very happy and facetious welcome address to the guests. Mr. Frederick A. Sweet, the millionaire coal operator gave an exhaustive analysis of the coal situation, showing that within the last few years the output had been increased about three hundred per cent, and went on to show the possibilities of future development.

"Lafayette Hanchett, made a strong plea for the construction of a railroad to the Deep Creek country. John F. Bennett was happy that he was present at the original introduction of the Rio Grande system into Salt Lake City and had been shipping over the system ever since; in a pleasing manner he showed the enormous increase of traffic over the road from the time it was built until the present time.

"The speech of the evening was made by Benjamin F. Bush, who is president of the Missouri Pacific railroad with 2916 miles, the Iron mountain railroad with 3360 miles, the Denver & Rio Grande railroad with 2597 miles, the Western Pacific with 297 miles, making a total of 10,852 miles. Mr. Bush is a very pleasing speaker, talking in the conversational style, but has a way of getting at his subject direct and in a convincing manner. The first big point he made was the fact that he was a coal man, and had mined coal in almost every coal mining state in the Union and he backed up Mr. Sweet's speech by saying he expected five years the coal output of Utah would be 12,000,000 tons per year, which would mean thirty-five train loads shipped out daily and an increase of population from this source alone of 54,000 people. His next great promise was to electrify the Rio Grande Western from Grand Junction west 325 miles. He promised to place the biggest system of railroad shops the Gould lines possess in Utah, and leave them with us."

"Mr. Bush was accompanied by the vice presidents and general managers of his various lines and promoters and financiers who handle the shovels of war for his system. These gentlemen were all enthusiastic over the prospects of the development of the resources of Utah, which means that the various resources in the near future be developed and the vast stores of wealth be utilized and converted into capital, which will build up the state in general, and Ogden and other cities will increase at even a much more rapid rate than at present. Mr. Bush was very optimistic and expects an unprecedented era of prosperity in Utah."

ANNUAL MEETING OF BEET SUGAR MEN

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 17.—The annual meeting of beet sugar manufacturers was held here today and new officers elected for 1914. Next year's crop will be the last to be marketed, it was said, as beet sugar will be unable to compete with cane sugar after 1915. One hundred millions invested in beet sugar factories, according to one delegate, will be forced to find new employment within a year. Factories in Michigan, Minnesota, Iowa, Illinois, Wisconsin, Kansas, Colorado, Montana, Nevada, Utah, California and Arizona are represented.

WILLARD-RODEL FIGHT TONIGHT. Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 17.—Jesse Willard of California and George Rodell of New York, heavyweights, will meet in a ten-round, no-decision boxing contest in Milwaukee tonight.
